PHILLIPS ALUMNI DINNER

Member of Fifty-Year Class Reads Poem Written for the Occasion—Gifts of $4,822,425 Announced to Provide for Additions and Improvements

The receipt of gifts to Phillips Academy during the past year totalling $4,822,425 was announced by Dr. Alfred E. Stearns, Headmaster of the Academy, at the annual alumni luncheon held in the Borden gymnasium last Friday afternoon and at which John W. Prentiss, Class of 1894 and president of the Alumni Association, presided. These gifts together with those reported last year as a result of the three year campaign, make the grand total of gifts during the past three years more than $9,000,000.

The speakers at the post prandial exercises were Julian Mason also of the Class of 1894 of the New York Evening Post, Dr. Heinrich C. Bierwirth of Harvard University, Class of 1879, and Dr. Stearns.

The three largest gifts—two of a million dollars each and the third of one million, three hundred thousand dollars—were given anonymously, as were also many of the others.

Among the improvements and additions stipulated by the donors are an art gallery, a new dining hall, the bird sanctuary already established, a new "Phillips Inn" and a new heating plant. The income from one of the million-dollar gifts is to be used for the care and maintenance of the academy grounds.

The report of the nominating committee was presented by Mr. Sullivan of the Class of '97 and officers were elected as follows: President, Thomas D. Thacher, 1900; New York, N. Y.; vice presidents, George R. Hewitt, 1879, Boston; George U. Ladd, 1884, Worcester; Henry W. Greenough, 1889, Profit, Virginia; Ord Preston, 1894, Washington, D. C.; Alan Fox, 1899, New York, N. Y.; Alexander W. McDougall, 1904, Detroit, Michigan; George Thompson, 1909, Fort Worth, Texas; statistical secretary, George T. Eaton, 1875, Andover; secretary, Frederick E. Newton, 1893, Andover; treasurer, George F. French, 1897, Andover.

Julian Mason, the head of the New York Evening Post was then introduced by Mr. Prentiss.

Remarks by Mr. Julian Mason
Mr. Toastmaster, Dr. Stearns, ladies and gentlemen: While casting around for a poem to which to hang this speech I talked to my classmate of the Class of '94, Judge Woolsey, and he gave me this perfectly delightful little poem. He said that Mr. Choate at one time gave this poem to a luncheon speech. He said, "Mix two smiles with one thought and add a great deal of shortening." (Laughter.) We heard this morning about change. Al Stearns told us about change. But our very badly prepared toastmaster has not even mentioned the subject of my speech. It is "Change." I do not mean simply change; I mean, change in the academy, educational change.

But you have not heard all of it because you have not been going through the most agonizing experience, and that is to find a college to which your daughter can go. You young men of 1929 do not know of the terrible trouble there is ahead of you on that, because girls' schools change more rapidly

PUNCHARD COMMENCEMENT

Pageant Is Given at Class Day Exercises Held on Playstead—Diplomas Awarded to Largest Class Ever Graduated from Punchard—Alumni Banquet Tonight

JUNIOR HIGH GRADUATION

Address Given by Rev. Frank R. Shipman, D.D., and Diplomas Awarded by Eugene M. Weeks

Eighty-four boys and girls were graduated from the Stowe Junior high school at exercises held in the Town hall on Thursday afternoon. Of this number one was a member of the transfer class and there were two special graduates.

The musical numbers included "March Celebrate" and "Lilac Waltz" played by the school orchestra and three choruses, "Morning" "A Dreamboat Passes by" and "Forget-me-not" by members of the graduating class with orchestral accompaniment.

The address to the graduates was given by Rev. Frank R. Shipman, acting minister at the South church who spoke in substance as follows:

Mr. Shipman said that he had chosen a gloomy-sounding text with which to start his address. It was to be found in some words of Job: "I am a worm and no man." Yet a worm was to be respected far more than perhaps Job had thought, and, if the Stowe graduates did as well as worms, they would do well. For, according to the scientists, a worm was the first animal to have head, brains, and that was a good point in which to imitate the worms. They, too, were the first animals to move with one end of the body always in front, and that was a second good point. Again worms were the first animals to show symmetry on both sides of the body, while fourthly the ribbon worm was the first animal to have blood. So it was plain that it was no small wish to wish that Andover boys and girls might achieve as much as worms had achieved.

Diplomas were awarded by Eugene M. Weeks, chairman of the School committee to the members of the graduating class:

The list of graduates: Priscilla Abercrombie, Higus Asioian, Mary Katherine Barnard, Isabel Elaine Batchelder, Marjorie Littlefield Billington, Drummond Bissett, Mary Elizabeth Bliss, Philip Bliss, Isabel Bourdelais, Betty Lawson Buchan, Ada Eleonora Carlson, Ella Elfreda Cederberg, Albert Henry Chamberlain, Jr., Robert Clements, Jr., Dorothy Helen Coles, Edward Francis Connor, Monica Theresa Coyle, Elizabeth Archibald Croy, Florence Beah Dennisson, John Deyermund, Jr., Florence Lavinia Dole, Marion Nicoll Fettes, Edith Sarah Flint, Elva Harris Fraize, Agnes Nancy Gallagher, Raymond Gallant, Rita Mary Gaudet, Blanche Mary Gilman, Robert James Grant, Isabella Tevondale Lamb Greenhow, Helene Elizabeth Hall, Margaret Virginia Harig, Olive Claire Hartley, Glenn Orr Hay, Alice Augusta Herbert, Helen Holden, Walworth Johnson, Bertha Wiggins Kent, Lyndell Florence Lawson, Barbara

When the World accepts the evidence that the Class of 1929 has offered, the Spirit of Punchard bids the members prepare to leave her bounds. As a first step, the Class of 1929 calls for Experience who gives the advice to undergraduates. Generosity in accordance with the legal custom of making a last will and testament, bestows the estate of the Class of 1929 upon those remaining behind. To ease the sorrow of the Class of 1929, Remembrance presents to each member a gift to remind him of his days in Punchard.

The exercises closed with the singing of the class song written by Dorothy Ruhl.

than boys' schools change. There are certain intangibles there that they both adore that do not work for us so much.

Professor Grandgent this morning said that he noted in change nowadays a certain acceleration of pace, and I would like to say that somebody must have stepped on the accelerator here in Andover. It is a different picture, a different picture. It has changed in its physical look—always, I think, for the better, but sometimes I wonder if I recognize it when I come back. Professor Grandgent said that he doubted whether the moving picture was an art. I would like to assure him that the moving picture on Andover Hill is art, straight and undeviated.

Yet the more we change the more things are the same. I was listening this morning to one of our younger visitors who was complaining bitterly to her father that all the buildings looked the same. I thought to myself that that might please Mr. Bulfinch, Mr. Platt and Mr. Low, alike. She said they looked the same, and they are the same,—in spirit they are the same. These lovely old buildings in spirit are the same; they are reproductions and are really expressive of the original Andover. Andover, today, to my mind, expresses academically and architecturally New England with the same degree of beauty that the University of Virginia expresses academically and the deep South. It is the loveliest place in America. (Applause.) Yet beauty does not seem to change the school.

We were standing at the chapel this morning when we heard the strain of Caledonian music, and the Class of '99 entered. You know the story of the original inventor of the bagpipes, do you not? He invented the bagpipes and the Scotch clansmen put him in the very first row of battle to lead them. They wanted to see him killed. (Laughter.) Then one of the fathers, as we were standing there, said, "Do you know, my son in the Class of '29 has had just as good a time as I had here thirty years ago?" And I thought to myself, "Well, you mean, in other words, that the massive resistance to ideas on the part of the under-graduates, their impertinability, their resistance, is so great that even if you give them beauty they resist it and have just as good a time as they had in the old Latin and English Commons." (Laughter.)

All this beauty has come to us really without our effort. That unknown donor, who appears with such modesty and with such clocklike regularity at every commencement has done it for us. We have been singularly unaffected by drives for funds. We have not been bothered by appeals to go out and raise money. And those appeals in the process of a drive have other than individual pain, I can assure you.

I remember when we were in the midst of the raising of the Yale Endowment Fund, President Angell gave us a perfectly delightful incident exemplifying that. He said that Wellesley College some years ago started out to raise an endowment fund of $3,000,000 and one of the young alumna, who lived in Florida, who did not have any money, made up her mind that she was going to help out toward the fund. So she got a large number of match boxes and she emptied out the matches and she bound each box about with pretty colored paper and gold lace and silver paper, and into each one of those boxes she put a small cake of soap. She determined to sell each of those boxes for a dollar and to give the returns to the fund. Of course she fixed on her unfortunate young brother to go out and sell the match boxes. He went out and he sold a few things that we ought to do but do not like to do. (Laughter.) So that this poor kid went out to sell these match boxes, and he went down the road and he came to the door of a very nice house and rang the bell, and a very young lady came to the door. She told him to go and asked her place to buy one of these match boxes for a dollar. She said, "Well, what do you want me to buy the match box for?" "Oh," he said, "I am raising $3,000,000 for Wellesley College." And she said, "Are you raising it all on your own?" he said, "There is another little boy up the street that is selling soap too." (Laughter.)

After all, I think when we have a very large boy up the street selling soap for Andover that it is up to us graduates, those first graduates, and those second graduates, each one in our own way, to sell all the soap we can for Andover. I thank you. (Applause.)

The next speaker was Dr. Heinrich Conrad Bierwirth who was graduated from Andover in 1879 and in the words of the chairman "has been teaching the world in many useful ways for fifty years." He is now a professor at Harvard University.

Remarks by Dr. Heinrich Conrad Bierwirth

Mr. Toastmaster, Dr. Stearns, ladies and gentlemen: I have been looking forward to this day, but not with any particular pleasure to the task that has been assigned to me. I am to speak for my Class of '79, and I do not know what I ought to say. I could bring up a good many reminiscences such as every class can bring up about that time. There are perhaps some which should not be brought up either. I can only rely on the fact that, besides reminiscences, we also have in common a feeling of gratitude towards old Phillips which it behooves us perhaps to express just at this time.

I said that I had been looking forward to this day, to our celebration, our fiftieth anniversary, and I have thought of it a great many times, and for a special reason. I came here not only as a stranger, but I came here as a foreigner. I cannot in any way express what I owe to Phillips Academy. I should never try. But the thought, especially during the last year, was with me. It was with me day and night sometimes. It was with me when I spent last winter in Germany, and somehow or other the form and the tone it took was somewhat rhythmic. I dared not put it down, but it rang in my ears and in my heart. And when I came back I did put it down, what I should like to say, what I should like to have somebody to the manor born say and say in good form. Having put it down, I showed it to Alfred Stearns, for this reason,—that if his predecessor and kinsman, Dr. Bancroft, had lived, I should have gone to him. So that I sent it to Dr. Stearns, and I had a nice letter from him, and he asked me to represent the class. The class has not asked me to represent them, but I shall really pity them if they do not in some way share my feelings, for then I should think that they had come here for nothing but just a luncheon and some cheerfulness and exchanging some reminiscences. But the feelings of gratitude, the sentiments that are attached to this old place, are worth everything. They have been something for us to live for. We have lived upon them and by them, and I trust there will be many, many more who will go on living upon them.

There was one feature which I ought to mention. While these thoughts sometimes came and went, I thought fifty years a good span of life, and I had thought if I were ever to put down anything in any form the motto ought to be of the gladiators at Rome, "Mortari Salutem." But none of us of the Class of '79 I think is quite ready to cry out "Mortari." I changed the heading of it to "Salutem Sub Specie Actermitatis." And if you will bear with me, I will read just those few lines and then sit down. They are not addressed to any one of you. They are addressed to someone dear to all of us present,—every person.

Hear, Mother, on whose sovereign brow
The years have left no trace
Of all thy care for us who now,
Fast aging, seek thy face—
Our prayer hear—

Ere we depart
To join those gone before,
Fold once to your loving heart:
We ask but this—no more.

For soon our torch, we know, shall flame
Anew in younger hands
And, brightened by their own, proclaim
That yet this altar stands;

Mid storm of Time and Place;
Ay, joining still in every strife
For right, for peace, for truth,
And deeming death the gate to life
With everlasting youth!

Not cowering, nor as doomed to die,
Crave we (twere shame) thy grace,
Thy warning, and thy love, thy high,
Mid storm of Time and Place;

Ay, joining still in every strife
For right, for peace, for truth,
And deeming death the gate to life
With everlasting youth!

Hush! Let not boast our bosom swell:
All praise belong to thee!
Nor let a rash and sad Farewell
Mar this our Jubilee;

But wilt thou not, when part we must,
Forgive a silent tear?—We trust.

The Toastmaster introduced Dr. Alfred E. Stearns with the following words:

"I always think that in the years to come, in the centuries to come, there are going to be three great names that are going to stand out in the history of Andover. One of course is Samuel Phillips, one of course is Alfred Eaton, and one will be Thomas Cochran. (Applause.) We have not got Samuel Phillips with us today, and we have not got Thomas Cochran, although he was here yesterday—I believe he had to take the Secretary of State back to Washington—but we have got Alfred Stearns, and it gives me great pleasure to introduce him to you." (Applause.) (Every-body stands.)

Remarks of Dr. Alfred E. Stearns

Mr. Toastmaster, fellow alumni—and I mean to include in that the members of the graduating class now—fathers, friends and guests.

The pleasant duty of the headmaster on this occasion is very largely one of summarizing the events and life of the closing school year. It is particularly pleasant to me today to do that, with such able assistants as I have up here at the head table, and with all of whom I have had such close and inspiring personal relations. Julian Mason, who has fled from us, was for years the head of our association in Chicago, presiding with his usual wit and dignity on all of those occasions and literally forcing me for some ten or eleven years to sing for my dinner, for it was a tradition out there that I had to start, at least the Lord Jeffrey Amherst song before the rest of the banquet could begin.

Then here is our good friend Jack Prentiss, presiding, who has done so much to help us in the recent campaigns, and whose loyalty to the school has proved contagious wherever he has gone, and the fact that he has left his pressing work to come up here on this occasion and take care of this gathering tells its own story.

Then on my right is my old friend, Dr. Bierwirth, whose name was already a tradition in Andover in my undergraduate days, and has been ever since, and I can remember only too well of all the satisfaction and the joy which he has given me in his splendid address at Harvard, where he served so long and so efficiently on the Harvard faculty. And I always heard then, and I have learned to know it at first hand since, of his devotion to this old school. And knowing that devotion to its standards and its ideals, it was not surprising to those of us who knew him to find with what insistence and loyalty he held high and waved the flag of his country during the stress and storm of the great war when such could not be said of some, at least, of his Harvard colleagues. (Applause.)

Then here is Professor Ropes, also on my right, whose wisdom and counsel and friendship and help meant more to me in the early years of my administration than I can ever adequately express.

Then I see down at the tables our good friend Sam Fuller, to whom we owe this beautiful and inspiring tower over here which will always stand as a landmark and as an ideal of the boys of Andover to the passing generations of youths who may be privileged to come here.

So that, as I say, I have very deep personal feelings today as I bring my annual message to you.

This has been a rather unusual year in many respects. To the students, the years of growth and development are everywhere apparent, and it is not perhaps easy always to sense some of the eternals beneath the surface.

I do not know when, in all my experience, we have had a year just like it in the difficulties that have been presented and from an administrative standpoint. We always count on a certain number of childish ailments among the undergraduate body. We do not regularly count on difficulties of that kind in the student body, but this year we have had them. Professor Forbes, as you know, on whom we always count and whom we always welcome here so warmly on these occasions because of the love and affection which his old boys bear for him, which is shared alike by his mates on the faculty, went through a serious operation early in the school year and has been incapacitated and out of the harness ever since. I am glad to say that within recent weeks, especially, the evidences of recovery and the expectation of the old time virility and strength are steadily increasing, and we hope to be able to welcome him here again soon.

Professor Phillips—Jackie Phillips, as you know him—has been off enjoying a well earned year of leisure and recreation. Dr. Fuess, on whom we have had to lean so heavily in recent years, has been also recuperating from the strain of the arduous years gone by.

We faced for the first time in many years the loss by death of one of our youngest and most promising teachers,—Bay Murray,—whose spirit and influence were so splendid, the best, that we liked to have him in our midst.

All of this has meant readjustments and it has meant heavier burdens for those who were privileged to retain their health and carry on the work, and I cannot let this opportunity go by without expressing to the loyal member of our teaching force who so willingly and so unflinchingly took up the burden of the work and carried the work through that it might not falter or lag, my thanks and deep gratitude. It was one of the finest evidences that I have ever seen in my experience here of the loyalty of all undergraduates and faculty alike to the school that we love.

In the student body we had a pretty bad upset during the wintertime of childish German measles, which worked havoc with some two or three hundred of our number over a continuous period of weeks and pretty badly disrupted the work. There again, thanks to the efforts of those of the teaching staff, I think we have been able largely to overcome even that handicap.

Among those who took part in the program were: Minnie McIntyre, Thelma Wanamaker, Foster Matthews, Lena Palmer, Aileen Wood, Agnes Cummings, Annabel Stead, Letitia Fillybrown, Helen Stead, Laura Marland, Harry Evans, Harry Newton, Jennie Miller, Flossie Evans, Helen Davies, Birdie Evans, Willie McIntyre, Agnes Cummings, Lester Abbott, Betha Miller, Marjorie Davies.

There was a large attendance at the Children's Day concert held at the Methodist church Sunday evening. Those who took part in the program were: Pearl Wilson, Gertrude Stark, George Brear, Emily Moody, Edith Fallows, Viola Fallows, Pearl Nason, Eva Howell, M. Louise Hammond.

In the ordinary activities, athletic, social, literary, musical, and so forth, the standards have been kept high, and that in spite of the fact of exhibiting great courtesy towards our friends from New Hampshire when we deliberately and very enthusiastically presented them with a ball game last week. Mr. Perry, our good friend at Exeter, wrote me, thanking me for the courtesy, and I replied that while we had instructed our boys always to be courteous in that respect, we had not quite planned on their carrying out the suggestions as literally as they did in that particular game. (Laughter.)

I do not know that I have very much to say except in the way of a report, telling you of our material gains for the year. I do want to say just a word about the school itself, its aims and its ideals,—something that I have talked on perhaps too often on occasions like this, but something which is always, and necessarily, nearest my heart.

The student body that you see today—those of you who come back here and look back on your old days—has worked as good deal harder than you and I did. And that they have done that work with the finest of spirit we must testify. The demands of the colleges today compel it. The students of the college inspire it. The students and faculty alike, recognizing the responsibilities, are working harder than ever to see that those standards are maintained and that the goal sought shall be reached by every earnest and ambitious boy who comes here to this school. What I have said about the standing, and what Mr. Prentiss has said about the standing of the Andover boys in our colleges, is something that is being constantly emphasized by college officials on our presence, in public and in private, and it is something of which we are very justly proud, for we feel that with our system here, criticized as it is by some because it is felt by doting parents at times that too much liberty is allowed, that system does develop poise and self control and manhood, and the ability to stand on one's feet, and the ability to decide between what is worthwhile and what is false.

Someone has said that the school is a buffer for the bluffer. If there is one thing that our boys have learned here, I think it is that bluffing does not pay. I can't speak for their Latin and their Greek and their Mathematics and their Science, and all the rest, but I am sure that there is no Andover boy who goes out of here who has not learned that it does not pay to bluff, and that is worth something in college, and it is worth a good deal in the world today. We are confident of the future of those fellows because we have known them here, and we know they have learned the lessons we have sought to teach, and the school has always emphasized, and that when they get to college they will continue to hold those standards high. I saw just the other day the record of our freshman class at Yale, some seventy-two strong, and the list as it was handed to me had no man marked on the probation list, no man marked on the warning list, but all passed, and the average grade was two and one-half per cent higher than the average of the class as a whole. Let me ask you fellows of the senior class today to make the average at least five per cent next year.

I suppose some of you get worried at times as to all this material success which has been handed to us, thinking we may lose sight of the more significant and important things.

P. A. ALUMNI DINNER

But let me assure you that that is not so, and that these generous benefactors of ours who have played such an important part in recent months here, are filled with the desire that with the increased prosperity in material ways which the school is assuming, there shall come also an increased prosperity in intellectual and moral and spiritual lines, and every gift that has been made has had that aim, that end, in view, and definite gifts have been made for the express purpose of supporting those intangible but very real and vital ideals.

Now let me just give you briefly a list of some of the benefactors for the current year. You will recall that at our Sesqui-Centennial celebration last year we announced the raising of some $6,000,000 and more. It looks as if that ought to be the limit, but some of us do not seem to have a limit now a days and as I look back on those years of 1908 and 1909 to which Mr. Prentiss has referred, I fairly gasp at times as I remember how we struggled to get in those subscriptions that would make possible that $200,000 without which the school would have had to stand still or go backward, for we had to have that property, and it took us two years, I remember, and a great many of those subscriptions for $500 and $1,000 were made payable over a five-year and some a ten-year period, and practically the biggest gift we got was a $10,000 one, and when we had worked all day, or sometimes a week, and were checking up on two or three thousand, Mr. Sawyer and I felt we had made real progress. As I say, when I contrast that with what is happening to us in these more recent months, I confess that I wonder whether I am living in the same world or whether I ought to be living at all!

This for the year, then: One or two of these gifts that I am going to read were included in last year's notice of subscriptions that were promised, but at that time had not been paid. A great many of them, I think the majority of them, however, will be entirely new gifts since that time.

$1,000,000 from an anonymous donor for an unrestricted fund. Everyone realizes that when you get new buildings you increase your liabilities unless you have some way of supporting them. If you extend your grounds you add to your liabilities unless you have added income to provide for that expense. Practically every dollar that has been given us for material things has been matched by another dollar to see that those material things should not become a liability but should be distinctly and unreservedly an asset. $1,000,000 subscription from an anonymous donor—this "anonymous donor" business is getting rather trite—to establish the Emily Cochran Endowment Fund, for caring for and maintaining the grounds of Phillips Academy. This gentleman assures us that we shall have, before we get through, if we have not already, the most beautiful grounds, probably of any institution in America.

A subscription, announced only last year for the first time, of $1,300,000, from an anonymous donor, for an art gallery and paintings—American art. You all know that we already have the nucleus of a very remarkable collection of American art, some of which will be found in the two upper rooms in George Washington Hall at the present time, but much of which, already purchased, has not yet been publicly displayed. In addition to these paintings, which some of the leading artists of the country say now represent the most outstanding collection of American art in the country, we have been adding very rapidly old silver, and more recently a collection of ship models representing the development of American ships from the early clipper ship days down to the present time. This gift assures us of an art gallery, a building set aside entirely for the purposes of art. I can't begin to express to you what I feel is the real significance of that gift. It represents something almost entirely new and unique in American preparatory schools, and yet I am perfectly sure that if handled wisely, as it will be, it will become of increasing, and tremendously increasing, value to the students who go through this school. Every little while I drop into the galleries in George Wash-ton Hall, and I find, to my pleasure, some young fellows in there working away, occasionally behind closed doors, copying one of those beautiful paintings that are now hanging there, which is an indication that there are in our midst always those fellows who possess latent talent, potential tastes, and who may, if we can reach them early enough, be inspired and started on the right road toward real achievements in the fields of art. Then we can't help but rejoice with all our heart that the mere contact of the boys, as they are passing through here in their impressionable years, with such a collection of paintings of the best American artists and the best of their work, is going to have its subtle and permanent effect in shaping their ideals and in developing within them the appreciation of real beauty.

$700,000 from sundry donors.—Mr. Nathaniel Stevens, Mr. Richard A. Alger and an anonymous donor—for a new dining hall. That dining hall is already under construction, as you know. It will be run a little differently, I think, from the ordinary dining halls, which are concerned only with the food. We realize that that particular factor in the school year may be a demoralizing one or a helpful one according to the standards which are maintained not merely of the food, which does interest the undergraduates, but the morale and the spirit of the place. With those four large halls, one for each class in the school the opportunity will be given to foster and strengthen class spirit, class friendship, so that when you get through you will know you mates better than you do now when you are scattered through the various dormitories and boardinghouses, and I am sure that is going to play also an important and helpful part in our life.

$150,000 from an anonymous donor for the birds sanctuary. I do not need to dwell on that, but I am sure that we are going to make that of real value to the student body, as we test out this business and work it into our general scheme of life and study here.

$175,000 from sundry donors.—Mr. Anthony A. Bliss, Mr. Charles H. March, Mr. A. H. Caspary, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns—for the new Inn—a much needed place for our parents and friends, and one which will be homey, friendly, but modern and up to date. Work on that Inn will be begun this summer.

$215,000 from an anonymous donor for a new heating plant. Let me say that this is one of the most important, essential things that I can think of, and one of the most difficult for the average public benefactor to be lured by. "for the use and benefit of Phillips Academy."

$1,000 from Mr. John T. Mercer of Andover "to be added to the Mercer fund."

$12,500 from the estate of Henry S. Van Duzer, Class of 1871, to establish the Henry S. Van Duzer prize fund, and continue, therefor the Van Duzer scholarship which Mr. Van Duzer sustained during his lifetime.

$5,000 from Mr. Boetius H. Sullivan of the Class of 1905, for traffic signals on Main street, to help protect our careless youth.

$5,000 from the estate of Robert Gardner McClung, Class of 1886, "for such special purpose or purposes as the Academy shall from time to time determine."

$5,000 from Mr. George Jordan for ship models.

$5,000 from Mr. Adolph G. Wigren for ship models.

$26,475 from Mr. Henry B. Joy of the Class of 1883, to establish the Henry Bourne Joy Science Fund, and to provide that the equipment of our science laboratories shall always be kept in the most efficient and up-to-date form.

$217,450 from an anonymous donor for sundry purposes—model of property, purchase of property, portraits, gradings, etc. cetera.

A total, gentlemen, for the year, of $4,832,425. (Applause.)

I think that anything I could say after that would be superfluous. It seems to me that this is a good time to stop and a good place to leave you.

Let me add just this, however: Sometimes alumni have said to me in recent months and years, "Well, what is going to be left for us to do when we come to our part?" I just want to say that I am perfectly sure that the passing years and our continued extension and growth are going to develop steadily new and important needs. I do not think you need to worry about that. There will always be soap for you to sell, and we shall always be perfectly ready to take our share of the commission. (Applause.)

P. A. 5—Alumni 12

Seven runs in the first inning just about sent the Andover Academy baseball team down to defeat at the hands of the strong Alumni aggregation at Brothers field last Friday. The final score was 12 to 5 in favor of the graduates. The contest was played in a drizzling rain before a Commencement day gathering.

Besides the seven in the opening frame the former Blue athletes scored two in the second, one in the fourth and two in the fifth.

Andover scored all its runs in the fourth inning with Brooks Palmer, P. A. 19, on the mound. The latter relieved Bill Lord, former Andover and Harvard athlete. While Lord was serving them up he held the Academy boys to but one solitary hit in three innings.

Andover Students Receive Degrees at Boston University

With Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick of New York City as the speaker, Boston University's fifty-sixth annual Commencement exercises were held Tuesday morning at which over 1,000 degrees were granted. Among the recipients were Carl M. Gahan, 106 Chestnut street and Nettie D. Pritchard, 29 Morton street, Bachelor of Science in Education degree; Clara L. Richards, 33 Phillips street and Dorothy C. Trott, 85 Central street, Bachelor of Art degree, from Andover.

A capacity throng of 13,000 filled the great building, to see Dr. Daniel L. Marsh, President of the University, present the diplomas. CLASS SONG

The children sing their praise to thee
As they have sung before;
And may we lay our garlands down
To strengthen your rich store.

Thy memories now are dear to us,
And they shall always be,
As we start on life's journey long,
Our thoughts shall be of thee.

Dear Punched, now we say adieu
Thy praises ever ring,
The hearts of those who now must part
Of thee shall often sing.

—Dorothy Ruhl

Punched Graduation Exercises

The largest class ever graduated from the Punched high school, sixty-seven in number received diplomas at exercises held in the Town hall last evening. In two other respects this class is unique. The two highest honors were won by two young men. For the first time two cousins, whose parents and grandparents had all attended the school, were graduated in the same class. When this announcement was made Eleanor W. Ramsdell and Allan C. Edmonds were greeted by a round of applause.

Another interesting item in this connection is that Mrs. Ramsdell is observing her 30th anniversary and Mrs. Edmonds her 25th anniversary of graduating from Punched.

Music was rendered under the direction of Miss Miriam Sweeney, by the Glee club with orchestral accompaniment and by the Girls' Glee club with violin obligato by Alfred Greenfield.

The salutatory was delivered by James Daly Craik and the valedictory by John Denton Armitage. Honor essays were by Evelyn Marr and Etta Larkin. Another honor student whose average for the two years which he has attended the Punched school has been above ninety was Paul Edward Joseph. Other honor students whose average for the four years has been above 80 were Carlos Alberto Avila, Elizabeth Louise Blanchard, Edward Cuthbert Emslie, Ruby Marshall, Harlan Page Newton, Mary Fraser Partridge, and Dorothy Helen Ruhl.

Diplomas were presented by Eugene M. Weeks, chairman of the School committee who commented upon the size of the class and the fact that the demand for a higher education had increased in far greater proportion than the increase in the population of the town. He also commended the class motto "Let us be known by our deeds" expressing the hope that at the end of twenty years the class would have lived up to the maxim.

The exercises concluded with the singing of the class song led by the author, Dorothy Ruhl.

Tentative Fourth of July Program

In a little less than two weeks, Ballardvale will again celebrate the day set aside in observance of the signing of the Declaration of Independence in a manner befitting this great holiday.

A few hundred railroad ties will be built around an area in which inflammable material will be thrown, to a mountainous height. Ralph Greenwood is chairman of this committee and with his splendid corps of workers plans to make this part of the program the best ever.

Next in order will be the parade including horribles antique and local hits. An automobile parade will be an added feature and all people of the town having a machine are urged to decorate it and enter. This parade will be led by the band and the line of march will commence on Andover street passing over the principal streets back to the center. Over thirty entries are expected to be in this feature. Timothy Haggerty is chairman and is ably assisted by Thomas O'Donnell, William McIntyre and Ed Hall.

Another pleasing feature of the parade will be the old time life and drum corps which will make residents recall the past. Persons wishing to enter in the parade are asked to list names with the committee.

The vehicle parade with Fred Fone in charge will follow. This will include baby carriage or any vehicle such as carts, kiddycars or any conveyance used by children.

The chairman has over thirty entries to date and many more are expected.

Then will come the ball game between the Ivy baseball team and a Junior team of Andover. The Ivy club is a lively group of boys and will put up a good game against any team of their age.

Prizes will be awarded to the winners in both games.

In the evening there will be a band concert by a band of thirty pieces. The concert will be held on the property owned by Harry Nason which is next to the community room building. The location for such an event. Ample parking space for autos is provided at this place.

During the past week the soliciting committee has been visiting residents for funds to support the celebration and have had fairly good success. However in order to put over a celebration to equal any held in the past, the cooperation of the entire community is desired.

The production was a source of much merriment. Credit is due to the entire committee, who worked hard to provide a fine evening's entertainment. Refreshments were served by the hospitality committee.

Following the intermission dancing was enjoyed until midnight, with Mr. Casey and Miss Charlotte Gillespie furnishing the music.

The following is a list of those who attended the successful affair: Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Haggerty, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Biggar, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Brown, Mr. and Mrs. George Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter York, Mr. and Mrs. William Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Quimby, Mrs. John Duke, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Greenwood, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Peatman, Mr. and Mrs. James Moss, Mr. and Mrs. Starnes Corney, Mrs. James Nicol, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gray, Mr. and Mrs. James Kydd, Mrs. Frank Cramton, Mr. and Mrs. George Dane, Mrs. James Keating, Mrs. Fred Shattuck, Mrs. Alice Schneider, Mrs. William Ferris, Mrs. Robert Ryan, Mrs. Lewis Kibbee, Mrs. Nelson Townsend, Mrs. Frances Benson, Miss Jennie Hudson, Mrs. George Moody, Mrs. Prudence Brown, Mrs. James Schofield, Mrs. Ida Buck, Mrs. Elmer Conkey, Mrs. William Clemons, Mrs. Ernest Rollins, Guy Conkey, Mrs. James Brierly, Annie Robertson, Matthew Burns, Mrs. Miles Ward and Ralph Washburn.

New Right of Way Law Effective

The A.L.A. calls the attention to motorists operating in Massachusetts that the new right of way law becomes effective today. Under the provisions of the new law when two vehicles approach an intersecting way the one which enters the intersection first is entitled to the right of way. If the two vehicles approach, the intersection to arrive at approximately the same instant, the one on the right is entitled to the right of way. The intersection is defined as the rectangular area formed by the projected curb lines of both streets, or if there are no curbs then the projected side lines of both streets.

The A.L.A. urges all motorists to approach intersections with great caution and not to insist upon the right of way in case of accident, owing to the shifting rights conferred by the law, it is very probable that both parties will be found at fault.

BABSON OUTLINES FOUR BASIC PRINCIPLES FOR SUCCESSFUL INVESTMENT POLICY

Stresses Importance of Having Definite Working Plans for One's Money — Tells How to Apply Principles to Present Conditions for Dividend Returns and Future Profits

Babson Park, Massachusetts, June 21, 1929. From twenty-five years experience with investments and investors, I have learned that it is impossible for one man or group of men to forecast investment conditions accurately enough to justify investing all of one's money in any one way or in any one class of securities. Hence, the first principle of successful investment is to have a definite, comprehensive plan whereby you can take advantage of any contingency or condition which may arise. Such a plan involves four basic parts which are each adapted to specific conditions in the securities markets. Keen investors divide their funds into four parts, each part for use in a different way.

The First Fund is used to buy a broad list of stocks in a period of depression and readjustment and to sell them in a period of over-expansion; then to hold the funds in liquid form in short-term bonds or bank deposits until the next buying period arrives.

The Second Fund is to be used for income without regard to price appreciation. This fund can be used for the purchase of good bonds and seasoned dividend-paying stocks. Profit from a rise in price is incidental in this fund. Banks, trustees, and other regular bond buyers, together with small investors should place most of their funds according to this part of the plan. The money is safely and continuously employed at the highest rate of income consistent with safety.

The Third Fund should be set aside for the purchase, from time to time, of long-growth securities. A real service can be rendered by buying into young, depressed, or reorganized companies with fundamentally sound outlook, and relying for one's reward on the future growth of such companies. Intermediate price movement here should be entirely and reliance placed upon growth of the industry over a long period. Eventually such stocks may develop into very profitable holdings.

The Fourth Fund should be set aside only by those wealthy men who can afford to take a considerable chance. At best it should be only a small proportion of one's total investment.

Mal Hallett at Roseland Ballroom this Evening

The incomparable Mal Hallett, greatest of all ballroom attractions, is coming to Roseland-on-the-Merrimack for his fourth engagement of the season this evening. The booking of Hallett invariably means a capacity house at the Merrimack Valley's most successful ballroom. Mal's first visit to Roseland this year saw the shattering of all past attendance records. In fact, it is characteristic of Mal Hallett that he keeps on breaking records from one year to another. It is indeed true that when bigger ballrooms are built Mal Hallett will fill them. Mal's rare personality is the prime factor in his tremendous success, but the quality of dance music provided by his peerless orchestra also has much to do with making the turnstiles click so merrily.

If the test of an orchestra's popularity lies in its consistency as a crowd magnet, then Mal Hallett's famous band stands supreme in Eastern ballrooms. There are many fine orchestras in the East and Middle West and Roseland's management has brought many of them to this section, but after all is said and done it is Mal Hallett who is the greatest drawing card of them all. Mal will be on hand at Roseland this evening with a lot of new stuff. Incidentally, Roseland patrons are reminded of the fact that check dancing is featured there every Wednesday and Saturday evening, with the Jersey Jic-Jacs on the orchestral stage.

THEATRES

METROPOLITAN THEATRE

George Bancroft's latest all-dialog Paramount picture, "Thunderbolt," opens at the Metropolitan Theatre, Friday, June 21st. Josef von Sternberg, maker of "Underworld," directed the picture, which accounts for its realistic production of contemporary life. Its events are the episodes with which the newspaper blazon every day; its scenes are the intimate details behind the curtain of these gripping events; its chief character is a mighty king of the lawless land which continually threatens law-abiding society.

The story itself is not unlike that of "Underworld." It opens in the intriguing atmosphere of Harlem—that strange black metropolis—where Bancroft, as the fearful death dealer sways the lives and destinies of hundreds of human beings. The story then swings to the awe-inspiring setting of Sing Sing's Death Row, where the final exciting climaxes in this most exciting drama are enacted.

"Thunderbolt," brings together again the two men responsible for the outstanding screen success, "Underworld," Von Sternberg, the director, and George Bancroft, the star. It is Bancroft's second all-talking picture, the first having been the recent hit, "The Wolf of Wall Street." In "Thunderbolt," Bancroft is supported by Richard Arlen and Fay Wray.

Ted Claire and his "Met" Syncopators head a fast-tapping, furious and funny show, "Let's Go," filled with mirth, melody and pretty girls. Heller & Riley furnish the popular airs, while Al and Gussie Blum, eccentric dancers, live up to the show with their unique steps, aided by Grace Dono, Joey Ross, and the Dave Gould girls who complete the cast.

Guy Harrison, Director of the Metropolitan Grand Orchestra, offers as this week's overture, "Memories of Victor Herbert," while Arthur Martel has a treat in store for his many radio and theatre fans in, "The Surprise Solo."

Billie Dove will be seen in her first 100 percent talking picture, "Careers," beginning Friday, June 28th.

not forget that geometry is one branch of this science. The carpenter would find it difficult to build anything stable if it were not for geometry, for a knowledge of this shows him how to construct right angles and perpendiculars, and unless a building has actual right angles where such are required, it will not stand up and will of course lack symmetry. Also he can tell by the aid of certain formulae how to find the area of a roof or wall, and thus can order exactly enough material and eliminate waste. This benefit is also realized by the architect, who can tell by means of geometry what the dimensions of a building must be to contain a certain number of cubic yards. He employs geometric designs in planning his buildings, and can figure the length a certain line should be in proportion to the others to produce the most harmonious effect.

The civil engineer, too, must employ many mathematical facts in the planning of bridges and other superstructures. He must know how great a load the bridge will stand, the number and spacing of supports to give the maximum strength, the strength of the material he is planning to use, and many other facts. None of these could be found without considerable mathematical calculation, for it is not possible to build the bridge first and then test it; rather its exact stress must be known before the construction even started. The same is true in enormous dams, skyscrapers, and all other structures which the engineer designs.

Surveying is a very necessary profession which depends almost wholly on one branch of mathematics—trigonometry. For example, the surveyor often must find the width of a river or canyon, or the height of a cliff which it is impossible to actually measure. By finding the distance between accessible points, however, and measuring angles formed by lines sighted from these points, he is enabled to find the unknown distance very accurately, through the application of trigonometric formulae, which although easy to use were worked out only after hundreds of years of study. It is to the surveyor that we owe the division of land into countries and townships, as well as our maps and charts, which are of especial value to navigators.

Thus many of our important trades are founded directly on mathematics, although to the average man aid from mathematics is indirect, but very important. You have seen how great is the dependency of the architect and carpenter on geometry, and it is to them that we owe our houses, as well as our enormous skyscrapers and public buildings. Although it is possible to build a house without using any of the principles of geometry, the result is a building which is entirely out of proportion and which will collapse in a very short time. Moreover, without the help of geometry, skyscrapers and other magnificent buildings would be absolutely impossible, for in the construction of anything so enormous, the dimensions must be exact and the plans must be followed implicitly, neither of which could be accomplished without the aid of our advanced system of mathematics. Without skyscrapers cities would be impossible, and cities play an important part in modern civilization.

Another necessity and luxury of modern life which depends on mathematics is the automobile. At first glance this seems in no way to be connected with mathematics, yet every automobile built is based on mathematical facts. The designer used geometry and the laws of mechanics, which are dependent on mathematics, in finding the most efficient gear ratio, in slinging the car to make it more stable, in figuring the load on the cylinders as well as in computing other important details. Along this same line of industry is the aeroplane which is fast becoming a necessary factor in the desire of the modern generation for speed. Here even more depends on mathematics, and complicated formulae are necessary in getting the proper balance and wing angles.

The rapid advancement of the science of chemistry to its present far-reaching influence may also be attributed to mathematics. If it had not been for the discovery of the theory of atomic weights many facts of chemistry could never have been explained. Yet this theory depends solely on mathematics, for in it each element is divided into certain number of atoms, the number being determined by experiment. Using this theory, the chemist finds it much easier to work out problems and explain complex reactions. A better understanding of a subject of course tends toward more rapid advancement in it, and such is the case with chemistry, knowledge of which has so advanced that it is of major importance in the welfare and comfort of civilization.

Another important science which depends on mathematics is physics. By application of algebraic formulae to the results of experiments, the physicist is able to find out many of the laws of nature and explain her phenomena. Through the medium of this science we know the most efficient way of lighting and heating our homes; also we have refrigerators, gas stoves, and other similar conveniences.

One branch of physics which is of great importance in modern life is electricity. In fact, this is often called the "age of electricity." This giant had long been known to the genius of lightning, but it remained for the expert of mathematics coupled with the ingenuity of man to tame and harness it. Nearly everyone knows that electricity is manufactured by dynamo, but few realize that the operation of these machines is possible only through the application of mathematical formulae, which aid in wiring them to give the maximum output without overloading, which would ruin the entire system. Mathematics also helps in figuring the amount of power made and the various ways in which it may be applied.

Still another science which does not have so great an influence on the life of the average person, but which is closely allied to mathematics is astronomy. It is in the application of mathematics to the movements of heavenly bodies that this science reaches its highest points, and astronomical mathematicians are constantly dealing with facts and theories which they themselves find almost incomprehensible, although they have spent their whole life in the pursuit of this one study. For example, take the much-discussed Einstein Theory, which is of so great difficulty to comprehend that only a very few can fathom it. Yet this is but one factor in many astronomical calculations. The extent of such mathematics where infinity, an endless number, is constantly used in calculation, may be said to be limitless. Although the science of astronomy is not of major importance in the lives of the majority of people, there is one direct benefit which we do receive from astronomy. That is the calendar, which is based on the revolution of the earth about the sun, and without which it would be impossible to keep track of what was happening in the world.

Another important application of mathematics is in modern warfare. Of course most people are never going to apply the principle of mathematics in this way, yet in time of war the fate of a nation depends largely on the training of its army, especially of the officers. Wars are no longer fought by lining two rows of soldiers up against each other and having them kill each other until the side with the most men wins. Now warfare is really a science, in which mathematics plays a large part. A very interesting application of mathematics to warfare is in the aiming of enormous cannons, which can throw projectiles as far as seventy miles. The men who shoot the gun of course cannot see to aim it, but figure the position of their target from data radioed them from aeroplane observers. Then by further computation they plot the path of the bullet and find the angle at which to set the gun. An aviator must also employ quite complicated figuring in dropping a bomb, for the projectile will not fall straight down, but will continue in the direction of the plane. He must figure the force of gravity and the momentum from the plane, but also the wind resistance before he can know the exact spot to release the bomb.

Thus in peace or war, civilization depends in many ways on mathematics. It aids the architect, civil engineer, and builder in constructing houses, skyscrapers, and enormous buildings, as well as bridges and dams. Business, especially banking and credit depend on it. The surveyor uses it in mapping countries and staking out property. The successful construction of automobiles, aeroplanes, locomotives, steam engines, and all manner of machinery requires mathematics. It has greatly aided in the advancement of chemistry and physics, which contribute much to the progress of the world. In its application to astronomy it has advanced amazingly, and no one can tell how far it may go in the future. Mathematics is of great need especially in the aiming of big guns and the dropping of torpedoes.

Accordingly, although a knowledge of the Fine Arts is necessary for culture, and Latin and Greek are considered a requisite of an education, it is to the concise, scientific study and application of mathematics to daily problems and needs that civilization owes its advance to the present stage.

Picnic Tomorrow at Wenham

Plans are completed for the combined picnic tomorrow of the Shawshen, West and Christ churches and St. Paul's of North Andover to be held at Pleasant Pond Park, Wenham.

As the children are to be taken to the park in automobiles, it is necessary to confine the free transportation to only those who are on the Sunday school roll. Others may go if they provide their own means of reaching the park. The machines will leave the mall in the village at nine o'clock and a program of races and a ball game will keep all busy and interested during the day. The races will consist of short running races for the smaller children, sack and three-legged contests and prizes will be awarded the winners. The return trip will start at 4.30.

Party at Balmoral Gardens

Balmoral Gardens was the scene of a very successful bridge party Tuesday afternoon, June 18. The Ways and Means Committee of the Shawshen Village Woman's Club were in charge. Mrs. Royal Bradbury, chairman, was assisted by the following members of her committee: Mrs. Emil J. C. Shulze, Mrs. Harry C. North, Mrs. Willard A. Currier, Mrs. John M. Erving and Mrs. Frank Bartlett, who were charmingly gowned. White costumes were predominant while shades of orchid and purple were next in favor, with large, drooping hats. About thirty tables were filled and it was a most delightful affair, a souvenir being given for the highest score at each table.

Two Local Girls Get Degrees at Boston University

Two Andover girls received their A.B. degrees Tuesday morning at the annual graduation exercises at the College of Liberal Arts at Boston university. They are Miss Dorothy C. Trott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Trott of 85 Central street, and Miss Clara Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Richards of 33 Phillips street. Both girls graduated from Punchard high school with honors four years ago. They were popular in their classes in high school and college and have been leaders in school and college activities.

pal and teachers of the High School, schoolmates, ladies and gentlemen:

We the Class of 1929, having successfully completed four years study at Punchard and being on the verge of striking out for ourselves in the world, wish to express our sincere appreciation for the help and inspiration you have been to us. Especially do we thank our teachers, who have given all that they could in order that we might be fitted to carry on the work which will soon be ours. When difficulties beset our way they helped us through, and now in the time when all our obstacles have been conquered, it is with great sorrow that we say goodbye to them.

Classmates: For four years we have worked and played together, and now at the time when we must separate it is especially difficult to say goodbye. But in parting may we serve as an inspiration to each other and may we always remember dear old Punchard and the Class of 1929.

So hoping that we may in the future amply reward you for that which you have done for us, we the Class of 1929 regretfully bid you all farewell.

Smith & Dove, 6—Bird & Sons, 0

Smith and Dove gave Bird and Sons a severe trouncing Saturday at Andover to the tune of 6 to 0 in the semi-final of the Curley Cup and incidentally marched into the grand final of the tournament.

Smith and Dove gave a most brilliant display to win by such a decisive score. They were out to avenge the defeat of three weeks ago and accomplished in no half-hearted manner.

The proceeds of the game was for the benefit of John Henderson, the Doves popular goalie who met with an unfortunate injury in East Walpole a few weeks ago on the field of play. Henderson was able to attend the match; he was a most interested spectator and saw his colleagues revel in the victory.

From start to finish the Doves out-played their opponents, the works of a dominating front line being a treat to witness. Anderson, McLay, Dave Gentles, Scott and Bissett backed up by clever intermediates and a sound pair of backs being clever in the extreme, while it shall be said the Jimmy Low officiating between the uprights had much to do in keeping the visitors scoreless and the man of the moment in every situation.

It was 3.45 before the game got started, the visitors being delayed enroute coming through Boston on account of the heavy storm which deluged the street with water for a time tying up the traffic.

W. McKenna started the ball rolling and Low was called upon early to clear his lines. The Doves forced a fruitless corner and McLay's drive later was well saved by Clem. Haveron got away on the left and drove in for Low to handle safely.

The Doves settled down after this and McLay was prominent in some clever foot work that delighted the fans before scoring Anderson with a carpet pass for the left winger to test the goalie with a fine drive.

Not to be denied, McLay was soon in evidence again and opened the scoring with a quick low drive that was deflected into the net by Clem after making a great effort to save.

Five minutes later, the Doves bombarded the visitors goal, McLay again putting on the finish to beat Clem with a drive that entered the top corner of the net, giving his side a substantial lead 2-0.

Try as they would the visitors could make no impression on the Doves defense, Craig and Joe Gentles along with Denholm being masters in every skirmish.

The visitors got a look later and the nearest approach to scoring was when Mullen dashed in to graze the top of the cross bar with a fine drive.

The Doves' wingers were much in evidence, Anderson coming close to the mark with a drive that missed by a few inches with the goalie beaten, while on the right flank, Bissett timed a fine cross from Anderson to smash the ball in the net which was a masterpiece to give Smith and Doves a three-goal lead at the interval.

The second half was only a few minutes gone when Dave Gentles opened his account from a clever run and centre by Anderson by heading the ball in the net 4-0.

Bird and Sons appeared to tire, McLay and Scott both being remarkably clever in foot-craft which had the visitors defense all tangled up in trying to break up the connecting links of a brilliant front line.

McLay hereabouts eluded the opposition and served Anderson with another fine pass for the winger to display a clean pair of heels to the defense to turn in a pretty centre for Dave Gentles to beat Clem with a quick drive close to the upright.

With a five-goal lead, the Doves seemed to ease up, and the visitors made desperate efforts to break the ice, but Jimmy Low denied every attempt with three fine saves in as many seconds, and came in for a round of applause.

In the closing minutes, the Doves cut loose again and Dave Gentles made the score six for his side, with a good drive that had Clem beaten all the way.

Bird and Sons made another attempt, but Low was much alive with another good save. Shortly after time was called with Smith and Dove a good winner by 6 to 0.

Among the Missing

Another thing which we imagine is entirely obsolete in this machine age was the emergency shaped like a strawberry, to take the rust off needles with, and, while of course no one would have any use for it now, it's quite a loss to the world of art.

Idea of Modern Ship Traced to Egyptians

Shipbuilding had its birth on the banks of the Nile, according to the belief of Prof. Elliott Smith, expressed in the London Magazine.

Although, he says, at a very early period in the history of mankind logs and floats of various kinds were used by many people to cross narrow stretches of water or for paddling along coastlines, the real history of boat building began when the earliest dwellers on the banks of the Nile tied together bundles of reeds to make floats.

These simple craft not only determined the form of the wooden ships that succeeded them, but the methods of construction for making the reed floats, i. e., tying them together with cords, were also adopted when wooden ships came to be built by adding planks to the hollowed out logs which eventually degenerated into the mere keel of the composite ship. Thus the earliest Egyptian term for shipbuilding was the word signifying "to bind."

Even at the present time we still find upon the Nile all these primitive types that are survivals of phases in the history of shipbuilding, some of them more than sixty centuries old.
